

COLLEGE OF COMMUNITY ASSOCIATION LAWYERS

January 29, 2009

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing in my capacity as the Dean of the College of Community Association Lawyers to make you aware of Steve Weil's membership in the College.

Of the thousands of attorneys that practice community association law, Mr. Weil is one of just over 100 attorneys in the United States to be inducted into the College. Membership in the College is highly selective. It is an honor conferred by the College's Board of Governors only after a rigorous review of an attorney's credentials and experience. Eligibility for consideration for membership requires an attorney to have a minimum of seven years experience specializing in the practice of community association law. A successful candidate must also have published a significant number of scholarly writings, held leadership positions with CAI, taught classes and conducted seminars.

In working with Mr. Weil, I know you have come to recognize and respect his mastery of the many laws that apply to community associations. Mr. Weil's knowledge enables him to provide practical solutions to issues. That ability only develops with experience. Mr. Weil has that experience, and it separates him from other community association lawyers.

Mr. Weil's membership in the College assures your association is represented by one of the best community association attorneys in the country. While you may have already recognized that, I wanted to make sure you knew that your attorney is nationally recognized by his peers as well.

Sincerely,

George E. Nowack, Jr.
